

Angy's wedding design and, above, a detail from the dress.

Angry Angy's wedding vow

FASHION designer Angy Morton has torn up her Newcastle United top to make a wedding dress — as a protest at what she sees as the club's mismanagement, writes Bill McBride.

Angy, 34, has supported the Magpies since coming to Britain from Romania seven years ago, and decided her actions would represent an expression of her frustration.

"Many fans, like my husband Michael and I, are finding it difficult to wear our shirts with pride at the moment but, in the end, there's no escape as we're really married to the team," said Angy.

"We remain loyal, but we're so disillusioned, I thought ripping up our shirts to make a wedding dress would sum up our mixed feelings.

"The dress features the club's and sponsors' logos, and is on display at my boutique in Windermere."

Visit www.romantiquecouture.com for more info on Angy's designs.